WE GOT THERE! 5Alive now has a future! PHEW!!! We've had a load of donations, and our online appeal has raised a shed load of cash. It's still coming in, so I'll give a final figure next time. If you still want to contribute, check out pay.collectiv.com/saving-five-alive-28547. Thanks Libby!!

And I've had a message from the only biological daughter of the late Libyan President, Colonel Muammar Gaddafi who has an investment fund worth twenty-seven million five hundred thousand United States dollars (27,500,000.00) which she wants to entrust to me for investment project assistance. YIPPEEEEE (TEE HEE!!!!). Finally, on a very personal note, very many thanks to everyone who has asked me to pass on their best wishes to Sara, my wife, who, at the time of writing, has spent the last month or so in the RUH after suffering what I think is called 'auto immune encephalitis'. I am SO grateful and so is Sara. Peter

JOTTINGS FROM A COUNTRY CHURCHYARD

I CONFESS THAT WHEN I sat down to begin these "jottings" I had nothing in mind to write. Usually during the month, I would have noted down a few things which have occurred or I had seen or perhaps had been passed on by a friend. But this time, no. Just an empty file seeking inspiration. I turned back in the files to be earliest ones and was amazed to find the first was dated April 2015. Over 10 years ago, filling the space vacated by our long standing and still missed vicar, Martin. Perhaps I am all "written out" as the saying goes, having commented on seasonal flora and fauna so many times? Anyway, who would remember if I cheated and repeated one from 10 years ago?

One thing I did notice from referring back 10 years was the climate change effect difference on seasonal growth and blossom during those years. Then I used to have my orchard trimmed around the end of July- never earlier – as I love the froth of Queen Ann's lace grown shoulder high through which the dogs plunged and tumbled. This year the flowerheads were over and seeding by early June so I have had it trimmed earlier. Likewise the sticky buds on the churchyard conker trees were just unfurling in April 2015 whereas this year the blossom candles were fully alight in early May.

Those of us who watch “Springwatch” will have noticed that while, officially, some birds are adjusting their life routines - overwintering instead of migrating - or arriving to breed earlier because of global warming, insect life hasn’t yet kept pace with change to the same extent so that the usual abundant insect food is not available to synchronise with earlier hatched chicks.

Bats, too, suffer if the warmer weather coaxes them out of hibernation before the seasonal moths and other insect food is available. I may have mentioned before that I have bat louvres set into my slates – different shapes to accommodate bats of differing habits. Some fly straight out of roosts, others crawl into down-sloping entrances. When I had Bird Shadows converted from Chantry Grange’s old stables, English Nature did a bat survey and discovered four species of summer roosting colonies so when the bats departed in winter the roof was done and the bat louvres inserted in time for their return in spring.

We had bats in the Grange roof and my mother was terrified of them. A colony roosted in the roof of the bay window which jutted out over the window on my parents’ bedroom. On dusky summer evenings the odd bat would take a wrong turning and fly up into the open window – I learned to keep a small fishing net on a long pole handy as it was usually my job to retrieve the bat. But the first time it happened my mother shrieked, dived under the bed clothes and demanded my father “Do something about it!” He disappeared into the bathroom and returned with a bath towel wrapped around his head like a turban. On being asked what on earth he thought he was doing, he replied with sweet reasonableness, “Well bats are well known to get tangled in your

A PS FROM PETER

When I collected these jottings from Hazell she told me that she's thinking of holding a mini-garage sale on Saturday, September 27th. There will be, she said, all sorts of odds and ends and this and that she still has left over from previous sales and in all the years she had a stall at the Cheese and Grain where she sold stuff she had bought in. She stressed she never parted with anything of her own but now, she said, "Maybe the time has come for me to de-clutter a bit," she said. More in the September issue of 5Alive.

STRAWBERRY FAYRE FOREVER

Coincidentally the 5Alive cover this month features strawberries and on Saturday July 13th there's to be a Strawberry Fayre at Buckland Dinham's Village Hall. There will be a bar, street food, cream teas, live music and a bouncy castle. It all starts at 1.00pm – see you there!

RIP ROSEMARY WILLIAMS

I am sitting here latish on a Wednesday evening in June, June 18th to be precise, wondering what to write (and I am on a tight deadline!).

Today, somebody important to me passed away. Many of you know her, many of you are far more qualified to write about her than I am. Some of you would have known her for nigh on thirty years. I only had the privilege of knowing her for the last ten. Rosemary Williams was once an important part of the life of this village. She was a member of the WI, she was the Parochial Parish Council secretary, she was an avid supporter of the village events and fairs having hosted several in her garden in years gone by. Some people have mentioned to me she was sometimes a little scary even, but that is not how I know Rosemary.

When I got to know Rosemary, she was older. She was developing health issues after having spent many years caring selflessly for others, and if I am honest, she put her own self second as a result of her love and service to others. I met Rosemary at a time when she needed others to put her first. I was honoured to be able to do that for her. She invited us around for afternoon tea and cake so we could get to meet her having moved in next door – it was an interview.

Unfortunately, we got the time wrong, and she sent us away as she was not ready for us. We were not put off however and arrived at the correct time and had a lovely time getting to know our new neighbours. She had made the effort to make a cake to greet us, and she served us with tea in a teapot, which very much impressed me as one of a dying breed who loves to drink tea made in a teapot! They came and helped us celebrate our first Christmas in Buckland Dinham and Rosemary shared stories from the Northwest with Kevin as they had both grown up near Liverpool.

Rosemary's husband, Ian, no doubt many of you will remember him also, died in 2016; just a year after our having moved in next door to them. He was buried on the same day as Kevin's father, so we were up in the Northwest at the time. Rosemary's health deteriorated and she needed more support; she found herself feeling lonely more often. Unlike so many of us, Rosemary had not been fortunate enough to have children and so she felt that she faced a lonely future. We popped in to see her and invited her over to be part of our celebrations. She loved being social.

When Rosemary decided the house was too big for her, she set about moving into a very downsized place in Frome. She had an enormous task, as she had collected not just her and Ian's memories but her mother-in-law's and her husband's aunts, both of whom she cared for in their later life. She impressed me with her resilience and the way she steeled herself to be ruthless with reducing her belongings. It was often me who would be saying, maybe we should think about this or let's not be rash!

Unfortunately, the big move in 2018 didn't give Rosemary back her independence as by then she had been diagnosed with Parkinsons and associated dementia. Rosemary bore this well, being both practical and pragmatic. She has sorted her will and arranged her funeral service so I wouldn't need to worry. She sat me down and made me promise I would honour her wishes about end of life and made me understand that for her life ending was a beginning and she would be happy. Care was soon required at home to keep her safe. Covid hit and Rosemary was left alone – I still shudder to think how that must have felt for her, and it was a relief when paramedics gave me permission to be able to go and visit her. Unfortunately, carers changing regularly brought Covid to her and she ended up in hospital. Rosemary lost her ability to walk in January 2020 and was forced into a nursing home for her continued care. She bore this without complaint or fuss.

I would visit every week; we would look at her wedding photos and she would remember memories from times long gone. We would talk about her dogs and cat and the many houses she had lived in. She often mentioned the exploits she and Ian had in the Morgan they drove in their slightly younger days. I had glimpses into the life Rosemary had lived and wished I had known her then. She bore her steady decline with resilience and calm.

It would be easy to feel sorry for Rosemary, she died today, aged 87. She had a peaceful death. She slipped away by falling to sleep. A kind death that she deserved. Her time for service on earth at an end, a job done well. Many of the people she knew and loved had passed before her and the village as she knew it may now not really exist, but Rosemary counted and she contributed and I know that there will be many out there that have their own memories and stories to tell of Mrs Rosemary Williams. I hope you will be able to come and share those stories at her funeral, which will take place at her beloved St Michael and All Angels in the next couple of weeks, so we can bring a lovely lady to the forefront of life and celebrate her one more time. Go in peace Rosemary and rise in glory. Sam Nash

Apart from being a health hazard, it is most upsetting for people when it is found on a family member's grave, and it is a real problem for those cutting the grass and looking after the churchyard. Please respect the signs that are clearly visible, keep your dog on a lead and pick up after it if necessary. Thank you.

MELLS WITH VOBSTER PCC

It is with great sadness that we announce the death of Margarette Chillcott.

Margarette and her husband Charles have lived in Vobster for 35 years and Margarette has been an active and much respected member of our community. She raised her two boys here and was devoted to all her extended family and grandchildren.

Margarette was always there as part of a team organising the many village events in Vobster but was also very active in Mells too. She was a member of the PCC and served on the committee for the Mells Daffodil Fair. She was a regular volunteer in the Mells Village Community shop and a member of the Mells choir.

Margarette was a gentle, reserved person who found it easier to give than receive and many of us wished we could have done more for her in the last difficult year of her life. She will be sadly missed by all who knew her.

Pay & Grading Review: Somerset Council will spend up to £3 million on external consultants to carry out a pay and grading review for staff, following the creation of the unitary authority in 2023.

Safe Vape Disposal: Re-usable and non re-usable vapes must be kept separate from other recycling and put out in a small, clear tied bag, such as a sandwich bag, on top of one the recycling boxes.

Somerset on Screen: Somerset Council has reported that film and TV productions generated more than £4 million for the county's economy in the 2024/25 financial year. Much of this economic boost benefited local hospitality, accommodation, and catering businesses. Screen Somerset, the Council's dedicated film office, supported a range of projects, including the upcoming adaptation of The Salt Path, filmed in locations such as Cheddar and Minehead.

MATTERS ARISING

Pavilion lease and future of recreation ground: The directors are awaiting various quotes. Based on these, they will make a proposal to the Estate on how they will be funded and possible terms for the new lease.

HIGHWAY AND FOOTPATH ISSUES

Speeding vehicles in Vobster: Highways has responded to the questions raised last month and more consideration needs to be made into how this can be moved forwards.

Park Corner: The white lining has been reinstated and a new reflective give way sign has been installed.

Layby by Vobster bus shelter: Cllr West will put together a proposal of how the works will be carried out for Highways. Some tyres were dumped in the layby recently.

CORRESPONDENCE:

Email from resident regarding speeding in Longfield: It was felt that on the whole traffic is within the limit although there are some that are driving too fast. No action to be taken at present

Email from resident regarding litter bin for bus shelter at Rectory Corner: Litter is regularly left around this area and the councillors agreed to purchase a litter bin.

Precept: The chair wanted consideration to be given to increasing the precept quite significantly to allow the parish council to function at a higher level which would facilitate it helping with larger village projects which are currently out of the PC means.

DATE OF NEXT MEETING: Tuesday July 8th 2025 at 7.15pm in the Barn.

WHATLEY

Whatley is beginning to make the most of our wonderful new social area in the church. The first official social evening was a great success, with lots of villagers and visitors turning up to sample the range of drinks at the bar.

Many also enjoyed the delicious optional takeaway from Lungi Babas, along much chatting around tables in the sunshine before retiring inside as darkness fell. The final calling time was midnight! It proved to be so enjoyable that these 'pub' evenings will also be held mid-month, although takeaways are only available on the first Fridays.

The first coffee morning likewise proved great success, with irresistible cakes and delicious chatter. It was much enjoyed by locals along with passing walkers. Both these events will continue on a regular basis. We hope they will flourish, but you will have to be part of this, putting dates in your diary and turning up when you can. It helps us to become a community, rather than just neighbours.

Much thanks to the many people who are spending much time and effort to give us these opportunities; it is truly appreciated.
